Greater Noida Rescue Challenges Blanket Muslim-Victimhood Narratives

Original analysis by Swati Goel Sharma

The author uses a case in Greater Noida to challenge a claim that Indian Muslims were living in fear around the Ayodhya bhoomi pujan. The article cites four FIRs covering a woman's allegation of rape and confinement, the police account of her rescue after an exchange of gunfire, and firearms charges against two men.

Still from a post-encounter video released by the police

THE ESSENTIAL POINTS

- The woman's FIR account alleged that a man travelling beside the driver threatened her with a pistol and raped her during the journey.
- The police officer's FIR account said an autorickshaw ignored his signal to stop, and he heard a woman screaming from inside.
- According to the reported police account, both accused were shot in the legs during the encounter, and officers recovered two pistols and cartridges.
- PTI reported that police had found an earlier case against Nadeem involving alleged molestation of women in Greater Noida, informing Swati's repeat-offending argument.
